

Dr. Henroy Scarlett

DrPH, MPH, BHSc (Hons), REHS/RS, Dip. CH (Hons), Dip. MOF; Dip. PHI

Executive, JOHSPA

Dr. Henroy Scarlett is an Environmental/Public Health Specialist with over 30 years' experience in practicing, teaching, researching and consulting in the fields of Environmental Health and Public Health.

With an outstanding record as an academic, he is currently a Lecturer and Course Leader of the Faculty of Medical Sciences at the University of the West Indies, Mona where he teaches in the undergraduate and graduate medical and Public Health programmes, and is Acting Coordinator of the B.Sc., M.Sc. and Ph.D. programmes in Occupational and Environmental Safety and Health (OESH) in the Department of Chemistry, UWI, and has successfully supervised over 50 graduate level (MPH and M.Sc.) theses. Dr. Scarlett has also served as Lecturer in Environment Health at the West Indies School of Public Health and the University of Technology, Jamaica, and as an Adjunct Professor/Lecturer, University of Arizona, Mel and Enid Zuckerman College of Public Health, and Kent State University in the USA. Dr. Scarlett has published widely in peer-reviewed international journals and has made numerous presentations at local and international conferences. He was recognised by the UWI in 2008 for "Teaching Excellence", and received awards from the Jamaica Association of Public Health Inspectors (JAPHI) and the National Environmental Health Association (NEHA) of the USA.

In public service, he has worked as a Public Health Inspector with the Ministry of Health and as an advisor to the Ministry of Health on Environmental Health. Dr. Scarlett has served as consultant to the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) and the McCam Child Care and Development Centre, Kingston, Jamaica. He is a past president of the Jamaica Occupational Health and Safety Professionals' Association (JOHSPA); the Chair, International Federation of Environmental Health (IFEH) Region of the Americas; Director on the Board of the IFEH, and a past president of the Jamaica Association of Public Health Inspectors (JAPHI).

Dr. Scarlett holds Diplomas in Inspection of Meats and Other Foods and Public Health Inspection from the West Indies School of Public Health; a B.H.Sc. (First Class Honours) in Environmental Health from the University of Technology, Jamaica; a Diploma in Community Health (with Honours); a Master of Public Health (MPH) from the UWI, Mona and a Doctor of Public Health from the University of Alabama at Birmingham in the USA. He is a Registered Environmental Health Specialist/Registered Sanitarian (REHS/RS), the highest credential awarded by the National Environmental Health Association (NEHA) of the USA.